Welcome to another episode of Access the Akashic. Let's take a look at a mysterious finding of very recent origin. Due to popular mass media, organized religions and other similar things, humans today have little knowledge of theosophical concepts. When theosophical concepts are applied to real world mysterious and phenomena, a truth may be approached about the subject in which one ponders. These strange, algae-like mystery orbs are currently washing up on the shores of Sydney, Australia (specifically a place called Dee Why Beach). No one really knows what they are, and as usual, you will not generally find a theosophical explanation, or more broadly, a generalized occult explanation. It's frustrating, yes. Many responses are explanations without occult knowledge such as aliens, nature or natural forms, and what-have-you.

The clairvoyant of this newsletter and co-founder of Noumenal Extrasensory Existent Society, has recently dug up the dirt on this "mystery." As Blavatsky points out in The Secret Doctrine, mysteries are only useful for false religions and have no place with those in the know. Many people do agree with this idea and come from different spiritual backgrounds, but the majority do not possess the initiatory knowledge.

The Green Balls of Sydney are speaking with an urgency. Do you recall how at certain times there have sometimes been signs or wonders accompanying their appearance? I believe Plutarch mentions things like this in his works as so do others. The balls are not extra-terrestrial in origin. They could have been, but according to the clairvoyance, they are not. So are they a life-form we do not know about? No, they are not a life-form in and of themselves. There are not an animal or form of sea-life. As the author gazed into this special mystery, it took patience to allow the hidden realm to make it self appear clearly. What are they, you must be asking?

Patiently consider the finding that these green algae-like balls are from the etherial dimension. They are an occult phenomena. As the reading was taking place, the author at this point was seeking the answer as to what the implications and reason for these things appearing. A reading like this, that is not easily explained is of greater importance and it is the true clairvoyance that has to evolve alongside the questioning in order to gain the sufficient realism necessary in answering such things. NXXS requests that if you are able to handle and examine one of these objects, that you will take note as to the thoughts that come to mind during the instant of contact. It will be especially helpful to the world, and Australia specifically, that an individual(s) with psychometric ability will get access to a green ball in order to take down notes in this psychic direction. As a matter of fact, that is the reason they are appearing.

Do they speak to the heart? Are they resonating the heart chakra when they are held or do they correspond to another area? At what vibration are they singing out. What are they saying to the sensitive human? This is important to do. Someone please do a psychometric reading on one of these. Does holding it invoke a dread? The clairvoyance made it clear that you had better pay attention to this one...to this sign. They are condensing down now, as of the writing of this, from the aetherial and are floating to shore. The aetherial realms are trying to speak directly like this now and it's for a purpose. The majority of humans now-a-days don't mention much about occult or magical principles, as outlined by Blavatsky and many others, that we should always attempt to speak to the aetherial dimension and higher vibratory or spiritual spheres. Many doubt this is a reality. If only one person in all of Sydney could find these balls and make a serious clairvoyant investigation of them, it may help considerably, although the author here will now explain to you what they are most likely saying.

This communication of condensation into our realm from a higher sphere (not the highest by any means) is a way that people may begin to make that realm happy by communicating with it more, as in the times of old. Do these balls make a noise when you step on them? They probably do, but that's not so important, only another fact of condensations from higher vibrations into our more dense realm. Aliens from other star systems or galaxies are not the highest beings since they are dependent on some level of physicality. Likewise, these balls are condensing by way of an Intelligent Being or Beings unexplainable except through Ancient Theosophy and its kindred arts. Furthermore since this is a kind of message, a prophecy or ultimately even an omen, this may indeed be a message of planetary climate change. Recall that NXXS has zero political ambition or motivations, and that as occultists or theosophists, magicians, etc., we know that there is some reality to climate change outside of the attributes of humankind's doing. It's sad, but true and the omens before events come because there is kindness and sympathy throughout all the aetherial spheres and beyond. Through the kindness of spiritual intelligence, an urgent message is being presented to the lowly inhabitants of planet earth who may have forgotten the alterior existences found throughout nature's entirety micro and macro and throughout all time. What if Australia, because of it being an island and its proximity to the polar region, is hit by a major onset of dramatic-climatic changes? Let us hope not, but then again please let these green hairy balls of wondriment speak directly to your occult intuitions.

Sathya Sai Baba is known as a religious leader. We are not going to look at the theological aspect too directly here. You know the reasons for that if you have read back issues of A-T-A or have read nxxs.org at any length. What we will look at is this man's ability to materialize objects. The clairvoyance was clear about his abilities. That was enough to know to file his photograph away and save it in order to gain understanding of how he worked.

Haven't you always wondered about levitation, materialization or other unique talents of the eastern magicians? Yes indeed. Before doing the two readings on Sai Baba, the author had many guesses at what steps were taken in order to materialize objects. Guesses were for example, certain exercises, conjurations or other obscure techniques that only presented themselves via direct oral communication rather than books available to the public. The good news is that it is not as complicated as that. Everyone should know how to materialize for themselves instead of letting religious leaders take advantage of it. In fact, everyone should eventually learn to read the astral records, but that is still some time far off in the future.

Scoffers would find great humor in finding out the truth about it. Some things are simpler than assumed and other things are far more involved, yet even if they appear simple on the surface. The human way of looking at the surface of things has not increased special abilities or the valuable tool of subtle awareness development. Sai Baba did not have to do advanced conjurings or special mantras to make objects materialize. He made use of four-hour concentration sessions of extreme endurance. The mental stamina involved is not easily attained, although that is all that is necessary. The concept is that there is a strong concentrated meditation on the desired effect and the concentration is held in deep focus for several hours. During this time, it is certain that hidden properties of the mind are brought into function and availability. As Blavatsky says (she too possessed the ability) there is a precipitation and release of will right before the materialization. It seems that there is some natural talent necessary, or maybe just a very strong desire to complete the lengthy mentalization. In other words, the mind is going to the pre-phenomenal level, creating a visualization with the aim of objectifying it. Then there is a precipitation or condensation. And as Blavatsky mentions, it has to be tied-off in order to stay in the physical. This also serves to illustrate the fact that spells and certain gods invoked during magic are not necessary except to invoke the operator into his/her own mental focus in order to get effects.

Thomas Taylor (1758-1835) we have to thank for translating the heavy duty Greek philosophers. He was a vicious linguist, no doubt. He worked intensely and laboriously with all the details. We should not take his effort and work for granted. He certainly had to endure personal pain along his path taken. He set himself to this immense undertaking. He was always busy. Vowels and sounds were among his domains of mental courage. It was a solitary task and not for the weak-minded fool who could not handle it. To the detriment of his personal life, he sacrificed everything in order to translate Aristotle, Plato, Iamblichus, Porphyry, Orpheus and others because he knew it would assist the occultists. He knew it would benefit humanity and ultimately save the world. Let us not forget the real labor that he endured. Let's never take for granted this visionary.
